Legacy Community Health Opens New Clinic in Southwest Houston

HOUSTON – (December 15, 2019) – Legacy Community Health (Legacy), the largest nonprofit community clinic system in Texas, today opened to the public its new clinic in the Gulfton/Sharpstown area of southwest Houston. The nearly 33,000 square-foot campus combines patient health care, education, pharmacy, and social services into a one-stop-shop for patients.

Legacy raised more than $10M to build the new Southwest campus from foundations and private donors, including over $600,000 from Legacy employees.

“We are honored that the Houston philanthropic community, and our own Legacy employees, invested in our Southwest clinic,” said Katy Caldwell, Legacy’s CEO. “Not only can anyone who walks through the doors get quality, affordable medical care, they receive it in a state-of-the-art building that is designed to elevate the patient experience in every way possible.”

Located at 6441 High Star in the heart of Gulfton, one of Houston’s most diverse communities with residents from over 80 countries speaking more than 50 languages, the Legacy Southwest clinic serves approximately 800 patients daily. The new building provides the space needed for Legacy’s patients, offering the following services:

- Pediatric Walk-In Clinic (open 7 days a week)
- Pediatrics
- Obstetrics Walk-In Clinic
- Obstetrics
- Adult Medicine

The new campus’ modern design makes the patient’s medical journey easy, efficient, and convenient. It contains features such as:

- An innovative floor plan to support an efficient clinical work flow and allows for patient privacy
- Large inviting lobbies and clinical spaces with an influx of natural light
- Beautiful landscaping and outdoor seating areas
- Large classroom space to support patient education and community events
